30 years of innovative workspaces

Since 1989, Signature Floors has been at the forefront of creating stress-free work environments that inspire productivity and innovation. Australian-owned and operated, the brand's success could be attributed to their designer and flexible flooring solutions aligned with the evolving needs of the modern workplace.

At the centre of the innovation process is a talented design team uncovering the latest trends, technological advances and performance requirements in commercial flooring. There is also reliance on evidence-based design to craft products that are fit for purpose while serving broader organisational goals of connectivity, collaboration and employee satisfaction.

What's important in workplace design?

With today's workforce spending 90% of their time indoors, the ubiquitous office is in a state of flux. Plus, with the Covid-19 pandemic – there is a growing demand for adaptive offices that pay attention to employee health, wellbeing, offering them a sense of place, purpose, and comfort, comparable to that at home.

The upside of a well-planned office is that there is room for people to move fluidly, save time, and avoid bumps and injuries, which is responsible for 23% of serious claims according to Safe Work Australia's Key WHS Statistics Australia 2020. In fact, the Australian Work Health and Safety Strategy 2012-2022 finds that well-designed, healthy, and safe workplaces are likely to allow workers to have more productive lives.

In elevating the overall workplace experience, the use of innovative materials, textures and designs is paramount. Signature's versatile and modular suite of stocked flooring products – including carpet tiles, woven carpets, vinyl planks and woven vinyl – help customers and clients design workspaces that offer safety, comfort, aesthetic value and hygiene people desire from their offices.

Zoning & wayfinding with colours and shapes

Built-for-purpose flooring in open-planned offices can effectively reduce the number of navigation choices your team has to think of – allowing them to save energy for other more critical tasks. Flooring can help create pathways, provide directional cues, or even help with designing colour-coded activity zones.

With Covid-safe practises emerging as the new norm, Signature's coloured and patterned carpet tiles could offer a fitting solution. Architects and designers have the flexibility to mix and match designs by dipping into a massive pool of colour options across product types and create spaces that complement specific tasks or activities.

Another functional design strategy that works with wayfinding is incorporating shapes as part of the overall flooring plan. With 10 Shapes by Signature, you'll be able to select up to ten modular shapes in a range of stocked design options. These shapes can also be matched with Signature's other flooring collections for design variety – ultimately helping workers maintain physical distance and feel safe while navigating the workplace.

Colour for comfort & creativity

Colour can deliver comfort and create reassuring spaces that help people feel at ease while they work. And with colour built into the DNA of Signature's brand ethos – designers can avail endless colour-rich flooring options across categories like carpet tiles, woven carpet, vinyl planks and woven vinyl. Depending on the functionality or purpose of any given workspace – you'll be able to choose from a palette of calming hues for quiet zones or vibrant shades that inspire creativity and collaboration. Signature also offers the largest selection of stocked colours, so you're never falling short of colour options.

Wellness at work

In recent years, biophilic design, a principle that rests on incorporating natural elements like light, air, water, plants, natural materials, even the use of nature-inspired hues, has assumed prominence to boost wellness in workplaces. A recent Harvard study in partnership with global design firm Stantec found that biophilic design increased holistic health and vital cognitive functions.

As one of the most extensive surface materials adorning the workplace, flooring can improve indoor air quality, acoustics, thermal quality and lighting, contributing to a higher state of wellbeing and comfort for its occupants.

Signature's flooring products offer low-VOC solutions. What's more, our soft and textured custom carpets and carpet tiles lend tactility and comfort – with colours providing a connection to the natural world, impacting how people think and feel in a space.

Humans have a natural affinity towards nature and so, workspaces that are designed to bring the outdoors in automatically foster a culture of wellbeing, productivity and creativity for everyone involved.

Combating foot traffic

In workplaces with high foot traffic and constant furniture movement, a choice of durable and scratch-resistant flooring can maximise the returns on your flooring investment. As one of the highest costs in your overall design plan, protecting this investment should remain top of mind when picking out floor coverings for the workplace. Signature's flooring products offer:

- Comfi Bak® and Thermo Bak™ options in carpet tiles for long-lasting use and walking comfort
- Durable vinyl planks that come with a 0.55mm wear layer
- Carpet tiles with anti-zipper properties
- Carpet tiles with dimensional stability – so you can say goodbye to curling, buckling or shrinkage

Commercial warranty is available on all our flooring products.

Carpet tiles and vinyl planks with acoustic backing can help with mitigating noise in the workplace.

Endeavour Energy

Acoustic comfort

A noisy atmosphere in the workplace directly translates to feelings of frustration, fatigue, work stress and a general loss in productivity. According to a study on employee productivity by British Gypsum – accuracy of work decreases by 67% when employees are exposed to noise. Signature offers a variety of soft, resilient and hard flooring options that contribute to quieter workplaces by lowering reverberation time.

- Thermo Bak™ carpet tiles absorb up to 15%* airborne sound and 23 dB* of impact sound
- Comfi Bak® carpet tiles absorb approximately 30%* airborne sound and 32 dB* of impact sound
- 70% reduction in walking noise with WOVN fabric vinyl
- 88 Planks (vinyl planks) absorb approximately 19 dB of impact sound

*NRC, SAA, α_w absorption and $L_{n,w}$ impact sound test results can be provided on request. Results vary based on product specification.

Woven carpet

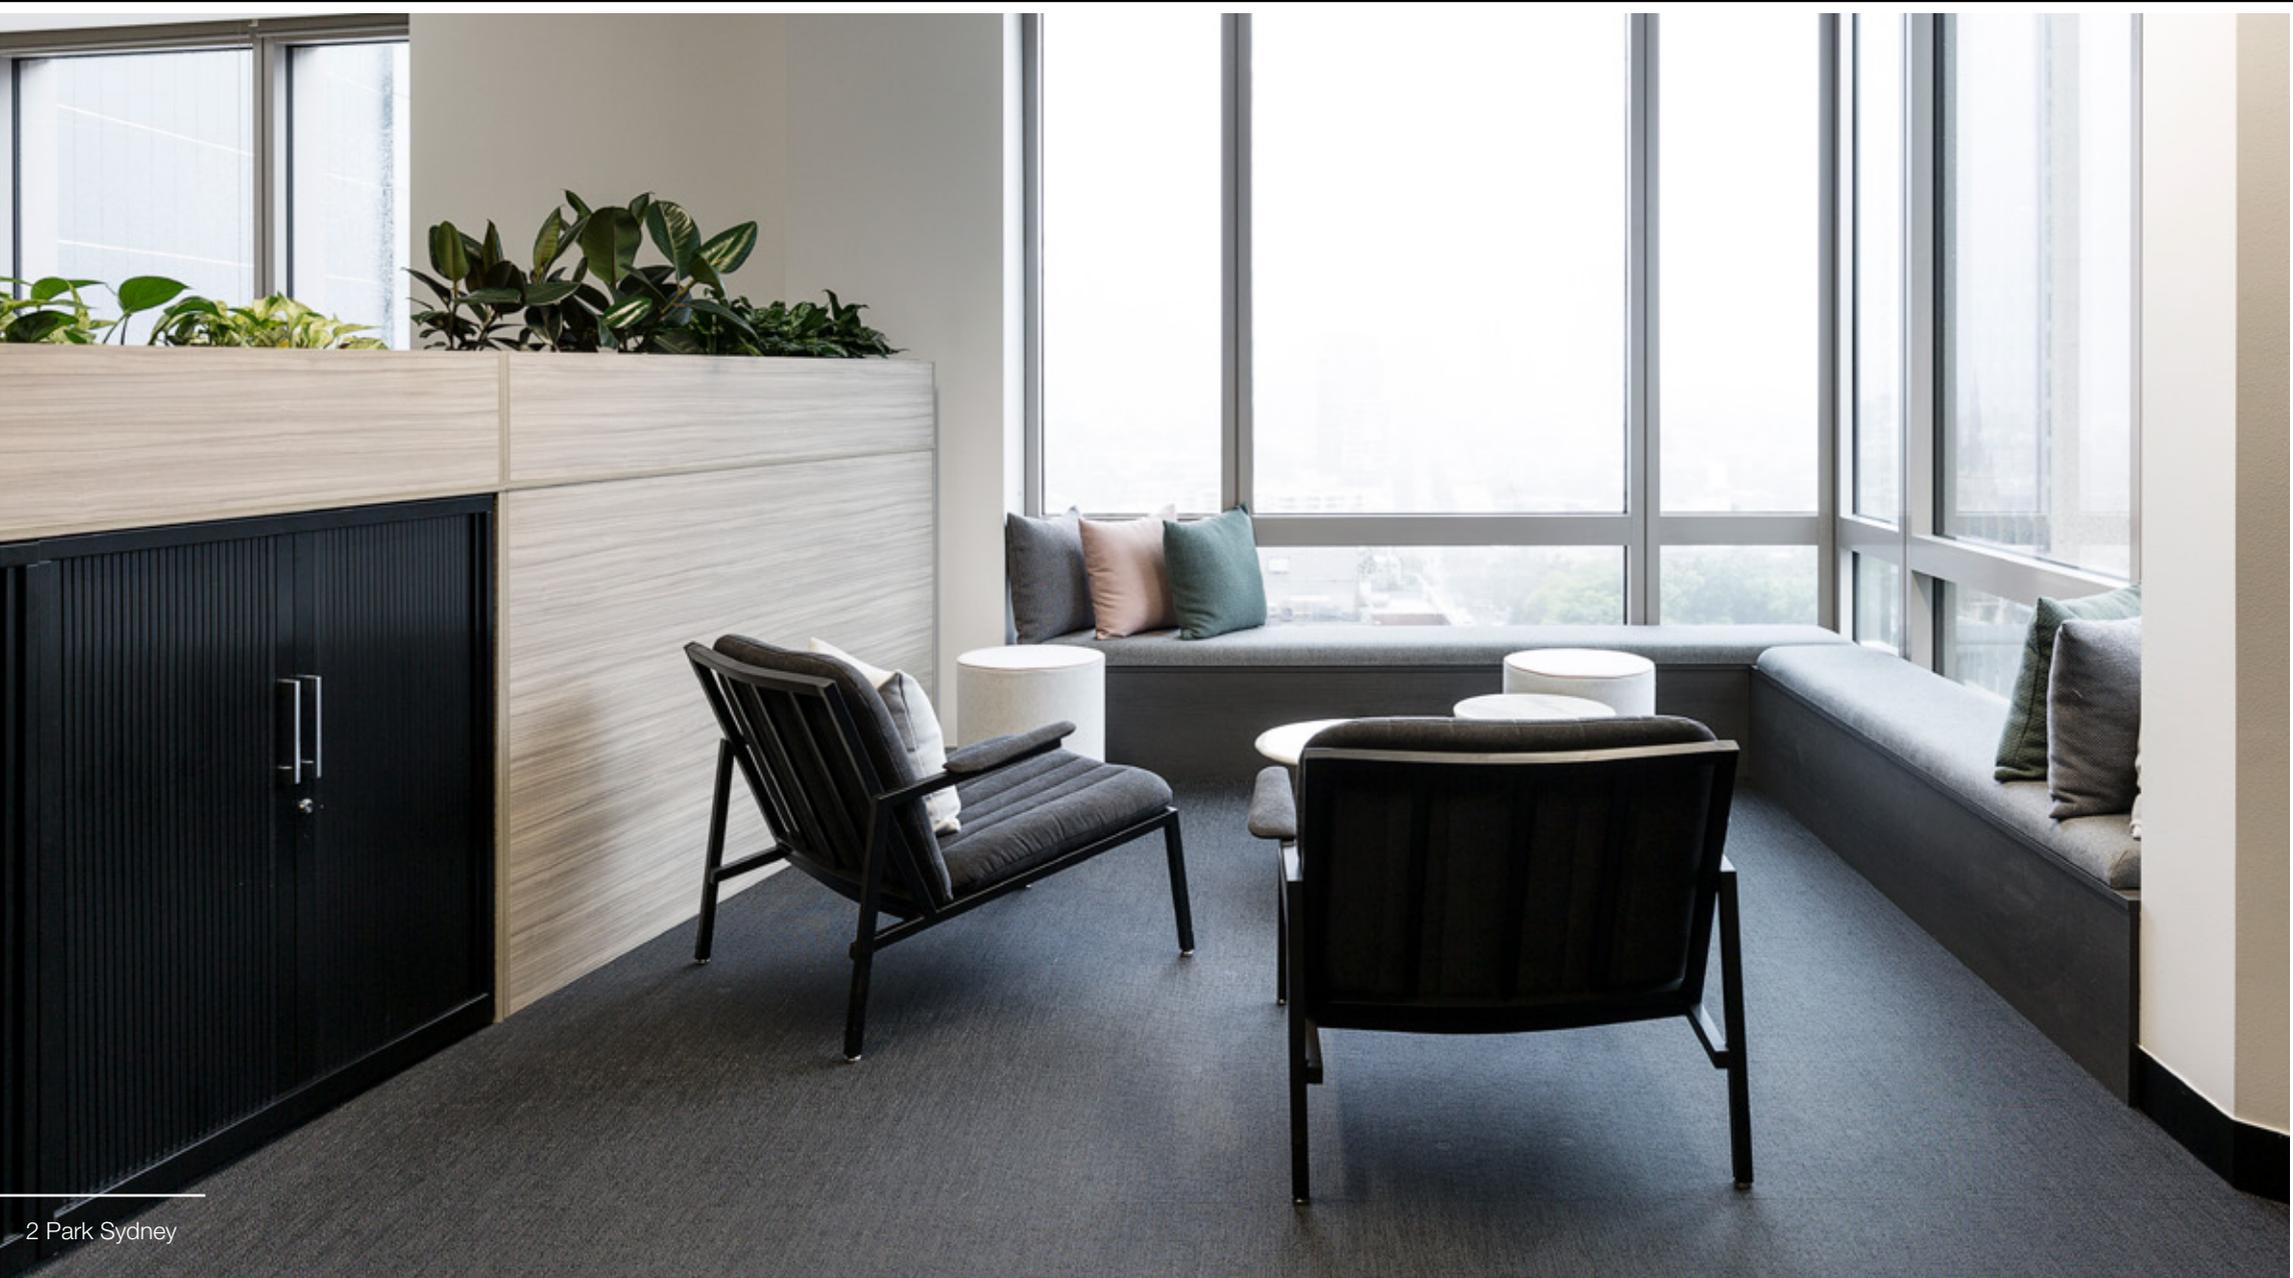

Weaving is a traditional 200-year-old carpet-making technique. Today's woven carpets are designed using state-of-the-art Axminster looms. This lends the carpet versatility in terms of colour variety and creates intricate patterns with the utmost precision.

Woven carpets are the gold standard in luxury flooring at Signature. With impeccable craftsmanship across a range of colours and designs – they make for stunning and sturdy additions to high foot traffic zones like office lobbies and corridors. Available in wall-to-wall and rug options – woven carpets are typically composed of 80% wool, 20% nylon and have yarn interwoven into the backing for added durability.
